

Collaboration

Anne Sissel Vedvik Tonning¹, Eystein Gullbekk², Therese S Skagen², Maria Carme Torras¹

University of Bergen¹, University of Oslo²

Contact:

E-mail: post@noril.uib.no

Editorial

In this issue, there are two articles, one peer reviewed and one in the best practice section. Please enjoy!

The first author, Anette Kolstad, presents and discusses how their project of collaboration between faculty and library of teaching evidence-based practice and supervision of their assignments, were experienced by the nurse students. The second article is written by Peter Reilly, and is about learning and creativity. Reilly discusses how libraries can support students in taking the risk of engaging collaboratively with novel discovery tasks

We are also happy to announce that the next NORIL issue will be a special issue containing articles from the Virak conference held in Oslo in June 2017.